

Clifford Lee Chavira

July 10, 1954 - August 25, 2026

Bangor, Maine

In Bangor, on August 25, 2026, Clifford Lee Chavira died at 72. Born in Bangor on July 10, 1954; Mexican-American cooking and payday thrift set the tone of the house. Early on, he decided that a paycheck and a handshake should weigh the same.

He welded cars that would leave without applause. A weld-coupon tag spool ended arguments more gently than speeches. Colleagues still mention a weld-coupon tag spool.

He and Barbara married in 1981 and raised one son and three daughters without needing an audience. After Barbara's death in 2019, he held to quiet habits-coffee before dawn, a tended yard, a voice on the phone that still checked in.

Neighbors remember a rake leaned against a shared fence after a storm. He liked early mornings before the heat or the noise. He died in Bangor, among streets he never needed to explain. The extra coffee is still in the thermos.

What remains is not a legend but a practice: showing up, keeping a promise, leaving a place better than you found it. His life was the kind America is built from and too often forgets to name.

Services

A quiet remembrance in Bangor. Those who wish may give to a neighborhood library, food pantry, or workers' aid fund instead of flowers.
