

DeShawn Marcus Holloway

September 15, 1964 - August 30, 2026

Houston, Texas

DeShawn Marcus Holloway died in Houston on August 30, 2026. He was sixty-one. Born there on September 15, 1964, he grew up knowing the bakery as a clock that did not sleep, and he learned a proof box before he learned a highway. A loaf, he said, is a kind of promise: it has to arrive warm or the whole story is late.

He spent twenty-four years on a night shift that fed grocery cases before daylight, first as a helper, later as the man who could hear a tired mixer before the logbook admitted it. He did not advertise. Managers called him because he would scrap a batch even when the truck was already promised. He kept extra rolls for the clerk whose morning had already been too long. He charged a fair hour on the side when a church supper needed more mercy than a price list.

He married Anita Holloway in 1988. They raised a son and a daughter in a bungalow that needed a new roof more often than the budget admitted. Anita taught school. DeShawn packed lunches that could survive humidity. After a bad afternoon he sat in the car with the radio off until his hands were quiet.

Friends remember a man who brought extra bread to a night shift without staying for thanks, who knew which intern needed a second explanation, and who hummed while he worked as if the oven were a conversation. He loved a late-summer tomato, a clean map of the rack, and the particular quiet after the last loaf. He died in Houston, in the heat he had always preferred to a clean cold. The ovens still open. Someone else will count the racks.

Services

A gathering in Houston in the evening. A gift to a night-shift meal fund or a school breakfast program suits him.
