

Glenna Mae Fetherston

July 4, 1952 - August 29, 2026

Eugene, Oregon

Glenna Mae Fetherston died in Eugene on August 29, 2026. She was seventy-four. Born there on July 4, 1952, she grew up knowing plywood as a rumor that paid and a river as a weekday neighbor. She learned a ticket before she learned a highway. A sheet, she said, is a kind of honesty: it shows what you hid or it does not.

She spent twenty-six years in a mill office that smelled of toner and coffee. She was the adult who could sit with a form without making a production of it. She kept extra clips in a drawer for the intern whose morning had already been too long. When the office sent a new form, she translated it twice: once into English a tired trucker could use, and once into the quiet that says you are not in trouble for needing help.

She married Dale Fetherston in 1974. They bought a bungalow in a neighborhood that later became expensive around them. They stayed. A son and a daughter went through public schools she trusted more than she trusted waterfront talk. After Dale died in 2020 she kept the garden of rhubarb and the habit of walking a neighbor's child to the bus when a shift ran late.

Neighbors remember a woman who swept her sidewalk and yours if the wind had been unfair, who kept a coffee can of measuring spoons, and who could sit through a graduation without making it about herself. She liked the river early, before the rain made a speech of itself. She died in Eugene, among hills she had never needed to explain. The extra clips are still in the drawer.
