

Lyle Keith Auker

May 21, 1942 - February 18, 2016

Fayetteville, Arkansas

On February 18, 2016, Lyle Keith Auker died at home in Fayetteville. He was 73. He was born on May 21, 1942 in a Norwegian-American family that measured love in finished chores. He learned that neighborhoods remember who helps without being asked.

He oiled crushers that never held still. A crusher oiler can wiped bright outlasted two bosses. Colleagues still mention a crusher oiler can wiped bright.

He and Doris married in 1966 and raised three daughters without needing an audience. After Doris's death in 2009, he held to quiet habits-coffee before dawn, a tended yard, a voice on the phone that still checked in.

Neighbors remember a shovel borrowed and returned sharper. Mornings were his favorite shift at home. He died in Fayetteville, on streets that already knew his pace. The chair by the window still holds the shape of a habit.

What remains is not a legend but a practice: showing up, keeping a promise, leaving a place better than you found it. His life was the kind America is built from and too often forgets to name.

Services

A quiet remembrance in Fayetteville. Those who wish may give to a neighborhood library, food pantry, or workers' aid fund instead of flowers.
