

The Polling Place Is a County Book Before It Is a Federal Scene

Election Day is November 3, 2026. Election administration remains a state and local book even when federal officers talk about scenes.

Election Day in 2026 falls on November 3. Polling places, poll books, and canvasses are kept under state and local election administration.

Public statements from federal officers about plans or non-plans at polling places make news. They do not move the legal shelf where the poll book lives. That shelf is still the county and the state.

A public paper on this register can note the calendar and the division of labor without turning a county elections page into a federal operations brief.

If a county publishes an official election notice, the register may hold a copy for search. The canvass remains the county's book.
